UNINETTUNO wins world award for its e-learning model

On December the 5th in Dubai the International Telematic University UNINETTUNO was awarded the International E-Learning Award 2014, Academic Division for the best e-learning portal worldwide. The International E-Learning Award 2014, Academic Division, is delivered by the IELA – International E-Learning Association, based in New York and including members from all continents and from all sectors (industry, businesses, governments, universities). IELA's objective is to promote research, knowledge and development in the field of e-learning in classrooms, universities and in workplaces. The Scientific Committee that assessed this year's applicants, chaired by David Guralnick, who, among other things, is a professor at Columbia University's Teachers College, was impressed by the quality and variety of this year's applications, and awarded UNINETTUNO the Runner-Up Award in the field of e-learning for UNINETTUNO e-learning portal.
